

A GATHERING to feel good about

Each Thanksgiving we gather with family and friends to give thanks and to celebrate the earth's abundant gifts. This year, show your appreciation by giving back with choices that support our planet's health, like choosing paper and packaging products when planning your annual get-together.

presented by

Touches of Elegance

Paper place cards and menus aren't just for formal events and are an easy way to enhance your table and your guests' dining experience.

Reveal the Recipes

From stuffing to sweet potato pie, we all have a favorite family recipe. Hand down history by giving your guests the recipe on printed cards.

Easy as Pie

Fans of pumpkin, apple, and mincemeat alike can all enjoy a delicious dessert a little more guilt-free when it's baked in a responsibly made paper pie pan.

Share the Bounty

Reduce food waste by sending guests home with leftovers and/or donating to a local shelter. Have plenty of paper and cardboard containers on hand for ease of packing (and so no one has to worry about returning your dishes).

Do Your Part with Paper and Packaging. Paper and products like packaging and boxes are made from tree fiber—a renewable resource. The United States grows nearly twice the volume removed from timberland annually. When you choose paper and packaging, you're choosing to be a force for nature.

Learn more about these renewable resources at paperformature.com

*Source: USDA U.S.

As seen in November Food Network Magazine

